MR. BLAINE UPON THE RESULT.

[illegible]

Blaine said Will consideration the loss by the bolt of the Independent Republicans and the farming class from the action of the Republican Prohibitionists, the whole matter that is the Democrats did not receive the State by a large majority, they could not fully expected they would. This result was prevented by the great exertions to the Republican ranks of Irish and Irish American voters and wholesale men of all classes, who sustained the principles of the party which is wholly this free trade would from their support.

"You notice third, the question you speak that you got a certain [illegible] in New York.

"Oh, I had chosen as upon those individuals Mr. Blaine, and should have had in my name but for his interest and activity. Improper conduct of Mr. Burchard, which was quoted everywhere to my prejudice and in many places affected by news, though it was in the highest degree distasteful and offensive to me. But as like you know, travels very fast, and there was not time to take action to overtake and correct that one, and so I suffered for it."

I asked Mr Blaine if he thought the Irish American vote was organized as an organized [illegible] leaders. "Yes, I think," he answered, "I was deeply impressed by the ability, the earnestness and the sincerity of Patrick Ford of the Irish World. He is a man of the most unselfish devotion to any cause he espouses—possessing a great faculty for organization. With marked ability and untiring energy. General Kerwin of the Irish Nation is a large degree the same characteristics, and is a far sighted and able man, with a then record as a Union soldier. The Irish Nation, edited by John Devoy, also gave us strong and valuable support. Alexander Sullivan and John Finnerty were very powerful on the stump, and did [illegible] active. Both are natural orators of the fervid Irish type. Sullivan's [illegible] speech in Tolen contributed very largely to the defeat of Frank Hurd. Hesse, with others whom I did not mention, have made a break in the Irish Democratic vote—one that I believe will [illegible] increase in the future as the full significance of the attitude of the Democratic party on the tariff question becomes understood and appreciated. Our Irish and Irish-American citizens will in due time get tired of voting in accord with the wishes of the English free traders.

I said to Mr Blaine that the Irish in Boston thought he understood the character of their people better than any other Republican leader. Mr Blaine replied that it would be regrettable for him to assume that, but said there was perhaps a strong leaning of the Irish element toward him because of the fact that on his mother's side he was of Irish descent. In Pennsylvania, his native State, he had received an enormous Irish vote—some counties hitherto strongly Democratic having been completely reversed in their populist majorities by the change of the Irish in his favor. This, however, was of course due in part to the fact that he stood as distinctively as the representative of protection to American industries—an idea which prevails with more force in Pennsylvania than in any other State.

"Mr. Blaine, did I not have correspondingly in the German vote?" I [illegible] at all, replied Mr. Blaine. "All through the West the Germans supported me nobly. How else could I have carried Chicago by nine thousand, Cincinnati by five thousand? Ohio, Wisconsin, Illinois and Iowa have the largest German population in the West, and I carried them by splendid majorities. Such able and influential German editors as Markhoff in Cincinnati, Kauffman in Cleveland, Praetorius in St. Louis and many others, brought great strength to the Republican cause. German orators were also most effective on the stump. Brucker, Gottschalk and Uhen of this State exercised great influence. There was a tremendous effort made to prejudice the Germans against me, but it failed. They knew wonderfully good-hearted people, industriously honest in their conclusions and just in their judgments, and I have abundant reason to thank them for their generous support. I shall not soon forget it. At different points in the West I found German and Irish clubs cordially uniting in public demonstrations."

Your correspondent brought the conversation back to New York by asking Mr. Blaine if he thought the Prohibitionists were honest in their support of St. John. "I have never during the campaign," replied Mr. Blaine, "reflected upon the motives of any man in and I shall not do so. I content myself, with saying that I think

MR. BLAINE UPON THE RESULT.

[illegible] because of the [illegible] with his advice [illegible] in handling and marketing honey and [illegible] business.

AND SO WE HAD A TALK

[illegible] interest in Maine," says Mr. Mason, "has increased quite fast during the last decade. And this right in the face of discouraging seasons and consequent delays from short honey crops.

The western development of agriculture has been wonderful within the last fifteen years. Lots of honey are now yearly produced by single apiaries cared for by skilled bee-keepers who make this their only business and who often make a fortune by it.

"Maine caught the fever some what, soon after the introduction of the Italian bee into this country some twenty years ago. About that time Mr. Langstroth brought forth and perfected his famous bee hive which was soon to be adopted and opened up a new phase in the business, providing new possibilities in the rearing and breeding of bees, which two decades of wood [illegible] progress has failed to fathom or exhaust.

WHAT MAINE WAS DOING.

"All over the West and portions of the South and in California and Kentucky and also into portions of New England were men and women, too who made a specialty of rearing queen bees and sending them to all parts of the country by mail. In warm latitudes, with long seasons the new method of caring for and handling bees grew into a profitable business and to many became a congenial pursuit. At this time Maine's bee keepers were struggling along with their bees in box hives, depending upon the brimstone pit at the close of the honey season for a supply of the sweets of the hive, thus killing the goose to obtain the golden egg. But the bee-keepers of Maine soon caught inspiration from the Western buzz, and notwithstanding the drawback of short summers and long, hard winters, they have become as well schooled in the intricate and wonderful processes of bee-life, that to-day the business is one of considerable magnitude, and I claim that the day is not far distant when Maine farmers will as constantly supply their tables with the pure sweets of the hive, as they now do from the golden product of the dairy."

SOME PIONEERS

"One of the oldest, and I may add strictly honest, breeders of commercial queens in New England was Wm. Cuicy of Colorado, Mass. He, I think, was the first to rear Italians from imported queens fresh from the Ligurian hills. Many bee-keepers in Maine can testify to the good qualities of stock sent out by Mr. Cuicy.

"C. P. Kidder, of Vermont, was among the pioneers of frame hive notoriety. The Kidder hive was quite extensively used in Maine."

"By the by, what became of Kidder that we hear of him no more?" queries the scribe.

"He went down under the decision of the great law suit between Langstroth vs. King. The royalty he was compelled to pay for the device of movable frames which was an infringement upon the Langstroth patent, swamped him."

HIS OPINION.

"What, frame, Mr. Mason, do you esteem the best for all purposes, and which, from your wide observation in this and other States, do you consider the most extensively used?"

"I am many reasons the Langstroth frame is best and will ultimately, I think, supersede all others, in so far as to keep in the ascendancy in use and favor even to a greater and increasing degree than at now."

MAINE'S INTEREST.

"What, in your opinion, is the interest in apiculture in Maine now as compared with ten, or even five years ago?"

"Perhaps I cannot better answer your question than to give you some figures of my present year's business, bearing in mind the fact that five years ago many started in to keep bees in frame hives.

The traffic in queens, in sending by mail, was quite commonly practiced by those best informed upon the subject. About this time, the seasons came on to be poor in the colder portions of the State, and several such years following in succession, many lost their bees, and this, added to rather weak fifth, sent many out of the business. But others were starting in, and those were stalwarts and outnumbered the weak ones, so, to day, Maine bee-keepers are more numerous than ever, before, and twice as enthusiastic.

LET'S HAVE THE FIGURES.

"As I was saying, my account books

[illegible] 25 cents to 50. If I got a queen what I know to be of good only, prefer to have [illegible] I take care not to [illegible] five spare queens. I [illegible] would not do without them. I [illegible] queens for [illegible] till she [illegible] worker brood, and showed all the [illegible] and black cells and extreme old [illegible] wonders we have in the matter of [illegible] and [illegible] and [illegible] Italians [illegible] queens, quarts, [illegible] queens, [illegible] queens, [illegible] queens

WEDNESDAY, NOV. 19, 1884.

The Republican Press and People Unshaken.

With scarcely an exception the Republican papers in all parts of the country, where Republican papers are permitted to circulate, is bearing the temporary defeat with grand fortitude and turning with unshaken purpose toward the work of strengthening the party for the future.

The papers that were most able and effective in the recent campaign are quite willing to give credit to all who aided in achieving the results that, upon so near being entirely successful, and almost with one voice the Republican press deprecate fault finding and useless lamentation at the time when Republicans all over the land should be encouraged and courageous as never before.

We are daily in receipt of utterances from all parts of our own State of the sturdy Republicans of Maine who led off the campaign, and while this vexatious gathering over what cannot now be helped, but are already strongly girding for the contests in which we shall soon be engaged.

No truer word was ever spoken than the New York Sun's recent declaration that of the two parties, the Republicans are in much the better condition. They are compact and united. There is no difference of opinion or purpose among them. The discordant elements have gone out and the party which produced Lincoln, Grant and Blaine is peerless for its fitness and discipline. The defeat of last week tends to promote and develop their courage rather than destroy it. Considered merely as political organizations the Republicans are in good fighting order. But, while this is true of the party as a political machine, it is not true of the people. It is not true of the victorious party. There is no such unity among the Democrats.

From this it is plain that Republicans need only to move forward together to be irresistible. The banners must not be furled but held high and with faithfulness to the great principles which to be the creed of the party glorious it will still be the bulwark of national welfare and in good time prove gloriously victorious.

'Rovering the Results of the War.

THE BANK OF WHIG at last gives up the fight and concedes the election of Cleveland. But the concession is made in a shifty way. One hand flings out its dispatches in apparent defiance while with the other it makes a confession of weakness. No one dares to reverse the results of the war. Whoever should attempt it would be at once thrust out—Portland Argus.

We would gently remind our Portland contemporary that two quite important results of the war viz: the fourteenth and fifteenth Amendments which have their status in the United States Constitution and the Electoral College with the intention that the colored vote on which it was based should be respected and counted, have thereby been so far reversed that Senator Brown boasted the other day that the Southern States secured the increased power which at once lifts the contemplated fun, artful swindle. The tyrant of Okolona was that without the electoral votes given the South by those amendments and now apparently left with defiance disregarded will of the people on account of which they were given, Messrs. Cleveland and Hendricks would not be able to command a majority of the Electoral College of 1884.

The spirit that dominates in the Democratic Press to-day crops out everywhere, North and South and the most conspicuous feature is a desire to reverse the political principles and results that have followed the war. The first suggestion for a Democratic Cabinet is that we have in a Democratic paper urges the obvious propriety of not departing to Jefferson Davis Postmaster General. Right on the heels of that official announcement comes the statement that Cleveland and within twenty-four hours we have read in Democratic type the proposition that General Selden Connor, one of Maine's gallant and honored soldiers, is to be displaced from the position he so ably and appropriately fills to make room for that most odious Copperhead Eben F. Pillsbury, who is to be recalled from the exile that he sought after the State Steal, to be Pardon in charge—God save the ark—of the pensions of our disabled Union veterans and their dependent families.

Here are only a few of the straws on the flood, on the surface, but they show which way the stream is running, and these things that are done in the green tree give strong indication of what will be done in the dry. That political annihilation of Democracy will speedily follow such attempt we believe as firmly as does the Argus, and we don't think it will be delayed many years.

Civil Service Reform.

Governor-elect Grover Cleveland speaking from the same platform with Mr. Hendricks recently said:

"In the event at hand when the Democratic party will have an opportunity to carry out its reform" the people will watch Republican candidates [illegible] Of course we will. [illegible] been a test because parties. The Republican party, in its twenty-four years [illegible] power [illegible] all branches with Republicans, while the Democratic party [illegible] popular majority in the House [illegible] it will [illegible] the Democratic party [illegible] as possible the offices will [illegible] Democrats. I don't expect [illegible] all the Republican office holders will be [illegible] out. The country so well [illegible] would be disturbed.

Fortunately for the country there is a Republican Senate which [illegible] to be intimidated by [illegible] Cleveland [illegible] the Senate of Ohio.

The Proud Anglo-Saxon will Rule.

From the Special Telegram.

He (Hume) told the negro vote of the South and the country, but the proud Anglo-Saxon race, with its energy, genius and energy rejected this ordinary [illegible] verdict, and will see that it returns to regular rule, the rule that followed [illegible] every [illegible] in the [illegible] statesmanship, to arouse so that it has [illegible] the world will [illegible] to rule here. [illegible] but [illegible] and it will [illegible] forever, that [illegible] white man whose cast [illegible] here all the time to come.

An Ohio politician made the following observation recently: "George Hoadley was a Democrat of the new school before he was elected Governor of Ohio. He promised to administer the office for the people of Ohio and not to elevate the employes of the State in their places for political reasons. How has he fulfilled his pledge? By turning out every public employee under the State government and filling their places with Democrats. He made a clean sweep. President-elect Cleveland belongs to the same new school of Democracy, and it is predicted that he will turn out much [illegible] Buckeye governor. He recalls [illegible] the Chairman of the National Committee. Mr. Hunt and Mr. Hendricks [illegible] would have been established as a precedent for political managers. [illegible] we did not see [illegible] comes to [illegible] from [illegible] possibly [illegible] forgive. Their fidelity [illegible] sacrifice. In season and [illegible] would have [illegible] the success of the ticket into [illegible] right [illegible] their conduct [illegible] who contributed [illegible] the success of the party as largely as they have done, [illegible] limited to those quarters of the public may rest assured that [illegible] will be duly [illegible].

"Do you think [illegible] safely [illegible] the party?

"On the contrary I think it solidified the party. We [illegible] compact powerful political organization [illegible] purpose. It [illegible] the triumph of the [illegible] the only [illegible] country will not [illegible] success [illegible] the [illegible] unity of [illegible] party [illegible] triumphed, but [illegible] has [illegible] majority [illegible] majority, the hope of [illegible] party [illegible] Cleveland is to [illegible] Republican [illegible] Congress [illegible] Senate [illegible] House [illegible] him will [illegible] the country [illegible] time which [illegible] Republican party [illegible] the interpretation of the Republican [illegible] and [illegible] countless [illegible] of the party [illegible] country.

"How long will the Democratic party hold together?

"Within six months the so-called reform record will be completed and the Democratic party will [illegible] the [illegible] and the cause is the solid South. [illegible] will [illegible] industrial [illegible] which will fill [illegible] with [illegible], but [illegible] wealth will tend to [illegible] the [illegible] public and the country to the [illegible] Democratic rule. [illegible] will drive from [illegible] all the [illegible] and [illegible] Republicans who have absurdly believed that the Democratic party is favorable [illegible] to the protection of American industries as is the Republican. The old parties [illegible] will not be recognized, and if not [illegible] should appear to be, the [illegible] who [illegible] neglected will take [illegible] and with [illegible] natural tendencies to bolt, the first purpose of the Independents will be to [illegible] the Democratic party which [illegible] recently crushed [illegible] the hooting and [illegible] ations. The [illegible] depend, as [illegible] know how to [illegible] method for [illegible] Republican party [illegible] Church or party save by defending [illegible]. I look for a strengthening from [illegible] time forward. In two years from [illegible] Republicans [illegible] and within two years I expect to see every Northern State [illegible] into the Democratic line."

The Solid South Justified.

From the Charleston News and Courier.

This was the justification which the Solid South is now [illegible] expected and predicted, it has been a [illegible] one. This is the justification of the Solid South long [illegible] for. When the struggle in the South was local in its [illegible] it was national in character. When the contest, the same [illegible], becomes national, the third [illegible] to do but to continue [illegible]. It is a great day for the [illegible] and a great day for South Carolina.

The New York Herald in a new demand that the Independents must have some recognition and the Giants of the Democratic [illegible]. It does not take kindly to Ideas advocated by the Democratic journals, the Independents were fluctuating so high and [illegible] purpose that the [illegible] of some of its [illegible] would be an [illegible], but on the other hand plainly indicates that the truly good element eager for division of the spoils as the very [illegible] and three party which they assisted [illegible] power. The New York World, however, reiterates its statement that the Democracy have no further use for the Independents and disposes of the Herald's claims as follows:

"Does the Herald forget 1882? Then Republicans supported Grover Cleveland and helped to give him 192,000 majority, instead of 107. Here were their 192 reasons then why Gov. Cleveland should have defeated Republicans into his councils. But he did not do so—not one. Yet they were defeated and supported him for the Presidency.

"Hoover enters President Cleveland's administration will enter as a Democrat [illegible] be true to sound, enduring, true-to-the-Union Democratic principles.

MAINE NEWS.

FROM AUGUSTA.

A Serenade to Mr. Blaine.

Expressions of Esteem and Good Will

From a Large Number of Personal and Political Friends.

Eloquent Address By H. M. Heath, Esq.

Splendid Response by Mr. Blaine.

An Informal Reception.

AUGUSTA, Nov 18 — The citizens of Augusta tendered a reception to Mr Blaine this evening, at his residence on State street, and long before the hour appointed for the reception the streets in the vicinity of the mansion were thronged with people, anxious to get a glimpse of the distinguished statesman. It was a spontaneous outpouring of the people, simply to show their appreciation of Mr Blaine as a man, and not as a politician. There was no organization connected with the affair, and no invitations were issued. The people simply assembled in front of Mr Blaine's residence on State street and led by the Cony Street band, with the Augusta Band, marched to the residence of Mr Blaine. Soon after eight o'clock the procession arrived at the house, and was augmented by the addition of a large number of people who had assembled in front of the residence. The house was thronged with people, and by the time the procession arrived on the ground the entire lawn in front of the house was filled with people. Mr Blaine appeared on the balcony and was received with cheers. This is the first time Mr Blaine has appeared in public since his return from the West, and the reception was a most cordial one.

Mr Herbert M Heath Esq then read the following address:

Mr Blaine — I have been chosen by your fellow citizens to bring to you their congratulations upon your return to your home, and to express to you their confidence and their affection. Unaccustomed as you are to the language of eulogy, you will not misunderstand the sincerity of those who speak to you in your own city, and who have known you for many years. Your fellow citizens have long been proud of you as a citizen of Maine, and they have watched your career with the deepest interest. They have seen you rise from the position of a private citizen to the highest honors in the gift of the people, and they have seen you bear those honors with dignity and modesty. They have seen you in the midst of the most exciting political contests, and they have seen you bear defeat with the same manliness that you have borne victory. They have seen you in the midst of the most violent political assaults, and they have seen you treat your assailants with courtesy and forbearance. They have seen you in the midst of the most malignant political persecution, and they have seen you treat your persecutors with magnanimity. They have seen you in the midst of the most cruel political slanders, and they have seen you treat your slanderers with contempt. They have seen you in the midst of the most unscrupulous political conspiracies, and they have seen you treat your conspirators with indifference. They have seen you in the midst of the most unjust political proscription, and they have seen you treat your proscribers with forgiveness. They have seen you in the midst of the most unfair political combinations, and they have seen you treat your combiners with fairness. They have seen you in the midst of the most unscrupulous political intrigues, and they have seen you treat your intriguers with honesty. They have seen you in the midst of the most unjust political persecutions, and they have seen you treat your persecutors with generosity

Agricultural.

The glowing beauties of summer have passed and the fruits and vegetables of autumn have been gathered, and the cold northwest winds warn man and beast to again seek shelter and protection from the snow and cold which days that are sure to follow.

To raise next year's crops successful, every farmer should begin the work of improvement to-day. The long winter evenings are now upon us, and the time cannot be better spent than in a careful study of future plans and arrangements.

The better the shelter for horses, neat stock and swine, the less food will they consume—the better the ventilation, the cleaner they are kept, the more healthy and profitable they will be. Pigs, as well as horses, show the benefit of cleanliness. As the nights grow long and cold, give shelter to all kinds of stock. The manure alone will pay for keeping them up.

It is the truest economy which looks closest to the comfort and thrift of the stock kept on the farm. The farmer needs a good house for the comfort of himself and family, a barn properly arranged to keep his grain and fodder from the weather, a warm apartment to protect his cattle from cold and storms, sheds and cellars in which to keep his manure, and a convenient room for storing vehicles not in use. Stock, though provided with the best of food, will become poor and diseased if they are not protected from the winds and storms. The impression is quite common that young cattle ought not to be allowed to run out during winter. The fallacy of this impression may be shown by attending a portion of the young stock a few minutes each day during the winter, and giving an equal number of them the benefit of good, comfortable stables, and just such food as those that range out-doors. The most experienced farmers admit that those which are stabled will require about one-quarting less food and will come out in the spring in better condition and vigor than the roughened, out-door fed ones.

Old-style farmers used to consider December, January and February as leisure months, but they can now be considered plodding months. The days are short, and the cold weather will prevent much out-door labor. Let your tools and implements be put in perfect order, and then consider the days as your own.

The good feeder of stock never gives them, nor does he give more than will be eaten with relish. It is not what is eaten, but what is digested, that furnishes profit.

The Essex and small Yorkshires are among the best of the small breed of hogs. With a number of these animals crossed on some of larger breed better qualities of hogs can be grown than with either breed alone.

To handle wood, the trees will come into bearing, and interest in the home and farm work will increase, holding them to your own localities. Till the soil after setting the trees; give them the same care and attention that you would your corn and potatoes. Plow the ground every few years. Take four or five crops and seed twice yearly, the last of June and again in August. Plow below the roots; enough fall apples to supply the home demand. Give your attention to the hardy winter varieties best adapted to your soil and locality, for both of these often in largely increasing what is left.

For the varieties, the Gravenstein is one of the best, but it is not hardy. North-side throw never enough earth up to supply the demand. Along the northern border of Maine and through Penobscot and Kennebec they cannot be relied upon to mature. Dogs rely on showing. The Gravenstein is a good one to follow the Northern. Multiply the flower buds of the fruit of your kind, while the others shall be set near the top. For very late keep the Black Oxford. Some other varieties have proved hardy and have been introduced recently, but have not been sufficiently tested to recommend them. Those mentioned are all good. Plant no seedlings. Buy only of those who will supply the wants for sweet apples. This, briefly, is what I attended to during the months of the spring.

Mr. Bennett, the member of the board from Penobscot, followed Mr. Gilbert, and in a few minutes' time went over the ground in such an interesting manner that the hour passed away many times quicker than it seemed possible. Both of these speeches were confirmation of the well-known common, of having them upon the program of the meetings of agents, and the audience were invited to stay and talk over the trees. Mr. Bennett, in describing what Mr. Gilbert had said, urged the planting of such fruits as would keep in the ground through the winter, and not require to be covered from which they had been removed in the spring. Mr. Gilbert said he had never taken up trees in the spring, and that they grew as well as those taken up in the autumn. Mr. Bennett said he had taken up trees in the spring, and that they grew as well as those taken up in the autumn. Mr. Gilbert said he had never taken up trees in the spring, and that they grew as well as those taken up in the autumn. Mr. Bennett said he had taken up trees in the spring, and that they grew as well as those taken up in the autumn.

At Dedham and Exeter, Prof. Balentine of the State College, presented the subject of milk in a clear, concise and interesting manner. Illustrating that the foundation of the udder and teat, he then considered the theories as to how milk is secreted, whether directly from the blood or by the digestion of the udder. The composition of milk and the description of its constituent parts were clearly brought out. Fat-cells in minute globules, the number being estimated at one 150,000,000th a drop. In the agitation of the milk these unite and form butter. The fermenting, caused by their growth as seen in the curd and sour milk, and also in the flocks of specific germs were noticed and explained.

The time when cows called for more than passing notice, for it is true that the muscles at the two ends of the teat have the power of contracting at the will of the animal, as seems to be the case, the gentleness of the milk woman which will produce best results. Not only is the production affected, but the milk itself by the treatment.

Experiments at the State College have satisfied the officers that twenty pounds of hay and three pounds each of bran, cotton seed and Indian meal was the best for the cattle, and also for the greatest profit. Twenty pounds of hay and five pounds of cotton seed meal daily—costing about 20 cents—would produce butter at a cost of fifteen cents per pound. Twenty pounds of hay and five pounds Indian meal would produce it at a cost of nineteen cents, and the same amount of hay and five pounds of bran at seventeen cents.

But, said the speaker, the best condition of the animal must be considered as well as the cost per pound, and this led to combining the three in the proportion named. Reduced rations gave less milk and less butter.

"Fruits and our fruit interests," gave our honored secretary, Mr. Gilbert, the opportunity to close the meetings with a most admirable and instructive address upon a subject of the greatest importance to fruit growers, and especially to those living on Ellsbee and rocky farms. The fruit growing is profitable there is no doubt, and its importance as a staple crop is to be and must be urged. For the best success there is necessary high lands with good drainage. Begin right. There's the certainty. Select trees adapted to your locality. Don't think because a Bell flower thrives on your lower lands that it is the tree for your uplands, for it is not. Let the boys be encouraged to plant an orchard, and as it grows learn to graft by all the methods known, and as they grow
